Photo: shutterstock.com Everyone loves the Christmas tree—as long as it stands proudly upholding and already fully decorated. Sure, some people enjoy the art string lights on the evergreen couch and unleash the opportunity to rediscover the cited jewelry that has been slashed in storage for many months. But no one likes taking the Christmas tree. Fortunately, with some simple tips, you can complete this dreaded annual task more efficiently and without major hassle. Prepping the start area of the process of taking the Christmas tree by placing an old sheet (or cloth drop workshop) at the evergreen base. If you've done this before, you know that the needle might fall as you work, so this step will save you some cleaning later. Do you have a lot of brittle jewelry? Consider putting some towels to keep them safe in case they fall as you remove the decoration. Taking jewelry • Remove the jewelry at the bottom of the tree first. That way, You limit the possibility that you will accidentally knock any down with your body. • To protect jewelry while they are in storage, take the time to wrap it in tissue paper or used gift wrap. • Liquor boxes with dividers are the perfect costless repository for out-of-season storage of the jewelry season. • For small jewelry and other costless repositories, recycled egg cartons work well as storage containers. • Once you remove them from the tree., wrap lights string around cardboard paper towel rolls to keep them organized and unpredictable until next year. Photo: shutterstock.com Disposing trees • Use turkey baster to remove any water that remains in a standing Christmas tree. • Remove a tree skirt; if it is covered with needles, shake them onto the sheets you have put. • Spread the sheets to full dimensions, placing the tree crumblly on it. Release a stand. • Collect sheets around a tree like sling, then use it to carry trees outside. Next year, make disposal easier with a Christmas tree bag. Before placing a tree, place the bag under the stand. After the holiday is completed, simply pull the bag up and on the tree and tie it with twine. Then you carry a tree outside and remove it from the bag. Most persistent needles will be trapped in a bag. In addition to leaving curbs on your tree, most communities across the country have a fish pond, sinking where it can serve as an excellent breakout and nutritional area for fish. Where to start? National Christmas Tree Association—along with Earth911.org, Scottsdale, conservation groups offer zip code detectors to help you find the right recycling solution near you. Check and start new Year from right and green! Cleaning stubborn pine needles. They get stuck in the carpet, and some remain even after you vacuum. Here's a trick: Sprinkle baking soda to the area before the vacuum to help the needle slide out of the carpet fibers. Because pine needles are bad for vacuums, use b batters and dust whenever possible. Try to make taking the Christmas tree a fun tradition. Put a movie marathon while you work, or plan to celebrate completing a task with a special hot cocoa recipe or a delicious snack. You'll have to wait another 11 months until next Christmas, so enjoy every last moment of the season this year! Richard Clark/Getty It may feel like you're just decorating your tree and now it's time to take it back (sigh). You may be seduced to just start pulling everything up and piling items in a box, but no. Instead, make your tree debug a more organized and neat process. 1. Lower the actual tree within four weeks of placing it. According to the American Christmas Tree Association, this is the maximum amount of time you should leave your real tree. After that, even the trees that have been in place and tend to start dry and become more fire hazards. 2. Work backwards. Start by removing the items you last placed when you decorate the tree. If you manage a home, statue, or train set at the base, this pack first. Then proceed to the tinsels, jewelry, lights (if they go out) and finally, the tree itself, if you have an artificial one. This way, you can save items in the order you naturally want them next year. 3. But let the skirt or cotton fight in place for last. Or put a towel under the tree until all the jewelry is removed. A soft landing place can save your favorite bauble from shattering if it accidentally falls out of its branches. 4. Keep the tree illuked when you disassemble it. Doing so is easier to see any burned bulbs. Make a note to replace them now (shop for that sale) and save a brief next year. 5. Be careful not to custard. Remove the lights, one string at a time, loop them around your forearm as you will guide the ropes. Safe in the middle with a rubber band, pipe cleaner, or twist tie before you wrap it up. filo/getty 6. Replace any flimsy, crooked hooks. Trade them for safe and sturdy people before you wrap jewelry away and they will be quicker to hang next Christmas. 7. Write a brief description of the unmarked jewelry box. This will make it easier for you to identify your thinker without opening each box. Moreover, at the end of the season, the label makes jewelry with the right container faster. 8. Minimize the mess of pine needles as much as possible. Place a large bed sheet or release the cloth on the floor. Remove the tree skirt or towel you place at the base; shake the mess into the sheets. Sheet, turkey baster and siphon out the water remaining in the stands. List the assistant, and set the tree on the sides, stand and all. Then remove the stand. Hold the sheet like a giant sling and, with the help of your friend, take (or drag) the tree to a curb. Roll out of the sheet (and don't look back!). 9. Vacuum away from any remains. For exposed floors, sweep and pile debris into the sheet and dispose of them outside. For carpets, use a vacuum with a rotating brush turned on. Perform quick scans for jewelry hooks so they don't clog the machine. For the most stubborn stuff, sprinkle the area with a little baking soda for the coat needle, and suck it. 10. Flatten per artificial tree branch. If you have a faux fir, this will help it squeeze back into a storage box or bag. Transporting the tree into curbs 3. Cleaning needle Fastest Repair 1. Save the decoration. Pull off a tree skirt, and wavy some towels around the base of the sticks for fragile jewelry cushions that may fall - you don't want to clean the broken glass as well. Exit the storage box (or use an empty carton or a sturdy gift box headed for trash), and start removing the decoration from the bottom of the tree so as to keep from knocking down lower jewelry as you reach for those above. Let the hook (if they won't spoil the jewelry) so they're ready to go next year; quickly wrap up that doesn't have their own boxes or slots in tissue paper, crumpled gift wrap, or newspapers. Final step: Remove the lights, one string at a time, loop them around your forearm as you will guide the ropes. Safe in the middle with rubber bands, pipe cleaners, or twist tie-ups. Pack. 2. Incorporate 'baum'. Place a large bed sheet or release the cloth on the floor. Remove the skirt (if it is still there) or the towel you placed on the base; shake the mess into the sheets. Take the turkey baster and siphon out the water left in the stands. List the assistant, and set the tree on the sides, stand and all. Then remove the stand. Hold sheets like giant slings and, with the help of your friends, carry (or drag) it to the curb. Roll it out of the sheet. Walk away. Do not look back. 3. Needle nab. For exposed floors, sweep and pile debris into the sheet and dispose of them outside. Otherwise, remove the vacuum. Perform quick scans for jewelry hooks so they don't clog the machine. Turn on the rotating brush and put the nozzle on its lowest setting, lowest. The most stubborn stuff - the needle on the carpet - sprinkle the area with a little baking soda for the coat needle, and suck it up. Relax, you don't have to do this anymore for another year. Make Christmas Cleaning Easier in the Future Buy tree disposal bags (in vacation stores or homes); Put under a stand when you put your tree Keep your tree well completed, and fewer needles will fall Investing in pre-bright artificial trees.
